As a former Assistant Attorney General, Andrew offers clients strategic counsel on high-stakes litigation matters.

He supports clients in a diverse mix of environmental litigation and governmental tort liability across industrial sectors. Andrew's practice primarily focuses on citizen suits, enforcement actions, climate change litigation, and all major environmental statutes. His experience also includes defending mass actions and toxic torts, enforcing environmental indemnity claims, and providing regulatory advocacy.

Prior to joining B&D, Andrew was an Assistant Attorney General with the Civil Law Division of the Tennessee Attorney General's Office. He litigated a range of Tennessee constitutional legal issues, including the Civil Rights Act, Health Care Liability Act, Tennessee tort reform statutes, and the Tennessee Public Participation Act.

Andrew is also the co-owner and co-founder of Wild Woods Nature School, a nature-based education program for children in Tennessee.
