Julius is a litigator and counselor who maintains a national practice.

He represents clients in complex matters in civil litigation and administrative regulatory proceedings arising under the Clean Water Act, the Safe Drinking Water Act, the Clean Air Act, the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA), and the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA). His ability to connect with clients and learn the intricacies of their businesses allows him to align his legal counsel with targeted actions that advance clients' goals.

Handling cases in state and federal courts throughout the United States, his knowledge of the legal processes and his multifaceted experience in resolving conflicts enables him to achieve favorable results that satisfy both practical and economic objectives for the Firm's clients.

For example, in a recent Clean Water Act citizen suit, Julius was a key trial team member that represented a client facing $4 trillion in damages. In addition to completing the lion's share of due diligence, he prepared the strategy that was instrumental in discrediting one of plaintiffs' experts, who had conducted a "study" in an effort to prove the client's liability.

Environmental Compliance Counseling

Julius counsels clients on developing and implementing environmental compliance programs. He never loses sight of the strategies needed to operate businesses more effectively within various regulatory regimes and laws. He helps clients optimize their processes and ensure that they are in compliance with their environmental obligations. Additionally, helps clients test the effectiveness of programs through environmental audits.

For Julius, practicing law also provides an effective way for him to be a catalyst for societal change. When situations present, he advises clients on strategies to consider the concerns of the traditionally disenfranchised. Among recent examples, Julius worked alongside a leading utility company that faced significant opposition to several projects based on their potential impact on low-income and minority residents. To help resolve these issues—and mitigate future opposition—Julius helped the company design and implement a comprehensive environmental justice (EJ) program. The program now enables the company to proactively engage—consistently and uniformly—with the local communities that they serve and, where feasible, incorporate the communities’ concerns in project planning.

Civic Involvement and Pro Bono Legal Service

Julius maintains an active civic volunteer profile. He is a founding member of the Men of Color Project (MoCP), an organization designed to build leaders in the legal sector, facilitate intergenerational support, and encourage community service and civic engagement amongst men of color in the legal profession. He is also involved in prisoner advocacy, having spearheaded the Firm’s participation in the Clemency Project, where attorneys assisted low-level, non-violent federal inmates in obtaining executive clemency via an Obama Administration initiative.

Since law school, Julius has been committed to providing pro bono representation, which included his work that secured the release of an inmate who was wrongfully convicted of murder after he had served 24 years in prison. Additionally, has represented pro bono clients in various areas of the law, including immigration, education, and landlord/tenant matters, to name a few.

He also mentors junior and senior high school students through several non-profit organizations, including UCF Youth Development Organization and JTB – A Pipeline Organization, among several others.

Representative Matters

Julius's experience includes:

- Serving as first chair for two commercial litigation jury trials and second-chaired a bench trial of a multi-million-dollar commercial litigation matter.
- Serving as a key member of a trial team that represented a leading transportation company in a Clean Water Act matter seeking approximately $4T in damages where the matter settled during trial for a substantial discount to the demand.
- Playing leadership role working as part of the Department of Justice-appointed Independent Corporate Compliance Monitor and Auditor team in connection with the Volkswagen AG emissions proceedings, where he focused on efforts to improve the company's environmental compliance program.
- Securing the dismissal of two pipeline companies in an action alleging responsibility for $25 million in damages resulting from contaminated drinking water wells.

- Playing a significant role in obtaining a favorable settlement on behalf of a major city's water utility in litigation alleging lead contamination of drinking water.
- Counseling companies on "voluntary disclosures" of environmental compliance violations under EPA's self-disclosure policy and analogous state-based policies.
- Obtaining dismissal of a Fortune 100 chemical manufacturer in two occupational exposure cases without answering any discovery.
- Working with a leading testing, inspection, and certification company to ensure business practices comply with applicable regulations and assisting it to perform an audit to test the effectiveness of those processes.
- Counseling a leading refining company on compliance with a state analog to CERCLA.
